- a. A correction was made in Paragraph 1.d. of the minutes of the previous meeting to show that a representative of CIA and not [REDACTED] was present at the meeting with Mr. Irons of the Retirement Division, Civil Service Commission, and that a CIA representative and not [REDACTED] would be present at the next meeting with Mr. Irons. With this exception, the minutes were approved as submitted.
- b. [REDACTED] submitted a memorandum establishing a definite interim procedure for the electrical transmission of emergency intelligence received during non-working hours, i.e. nights, Saturdays, Sundays, and Holidays to the various Government departments concerned. This firm interim procedure became effective 7 May 1948. [REDACTED] is to continue his research into this problem and will attempt to prepare for the next meeting a permanent procedure which will assure secure and prompt release, at all times, of intelligence by this Agency. In addition, [REDACTED] is to prepare a plan to ensure receipt by this Organization of confirmation copies of messages sent through or at its behest by other Government agencies. In connection with the release of raw intelligence via electrical transmission during non-working hours, [REDACTED] called to the attention of the Committee the danger of recipients misinterpreting these emergency messages as regular CIA disseminations. After some discussion with regard to protection of source of intelligence and this Organization, the Committee agreed that a stock phrase preceding the message might successfully prevent any misinterpretation. [REDACTED] was requested to consult with [REDACTED] in determining the desirability of such a phrase and the most effective manner in which such a phrase could ensure security of contents of the message, its source, and this Organization once these disseminations were released.
